

INTRODUCTION

The IoT conference series has become the major biennial event that brings internationally leading researchers and practitioners from both academia and industry together to facilitate the sharing of applications, research results, and knowledge. Building on the success of the last two conferences (2008 in Zurich and 2010 in Tokyo), the 3rd International Conference on the Internet of Things (IoT2012) will include a highly selective dual-track program for technical papers, accompanied by reports on business projects from seasoned practitioners, poster sessions summarizing late-breaking results, and hands-on demos of current technology.

Wuxi is a city that has more than 2,000 years of history and is located some 45 minutes by train north west of Shanghai. The city has been named the "Sensing China Center" since the year 2008 and is one of the leading centers of IoT-related research and industry in China. The conference will be held in the Wuxi InterContinental hotel, and there will be shuttle buses (~2.5 hours) connecting Shanghai Pudong International Airport (PVG) directly to the conference hotel on October 23, 2012.

EXPLORE WUXI

The islands of Turtle Head Park in Taihu resemble a turtle drifting quietly in the water, and are adorned with green trees, buildings and pavilions.

Meiyuan (Plum Garden) is home to 3000 plum trees and the mansions of Wuxi's most prominent Rong family.

Said to be the largest standing Buddha in the world, the bronze Liangshan Buddha stands at a colossal height of 200m.

Xihui Park houses the Dragon Light Pagoda, built during the Ming dynasty, which also offers the best views of Wuxi.
